Dear [REDACTED]

Thank you very much for your letter of May 5 advising me that you have now returned from the trip which you informed Colonel [REDACTED] you were making prior to your departure last December. Your letter was somewhat delayed in reaching me inasmuch as Colonel [REDACTED] has now transferred to another office and it was routed to him at a different location prior to coming to my attention.

In order to save you the long trip from Hanover to Washington, I would like to suggest that one of my staff [REDACTED] [REDACTED] contact you in the near future and arrange a mutually agreeable time for you to get together and have a talk. In this way we can also be assured of having a more leisurely session with you and gaining the benefit of whatever information and thoughts may have accrued to you during your trip. Unless I hear from you to the contrary, I will proceed on the assumption that this arrangement meets with your approval and will accordingly instruct our [REDACTED] representative to get in touch with you in the near future.

Sincerely,

Allen W. Dulles
Director
